Foreword

This dispersion is occasioned by the fact that our oil interests completely require our time that we find it impossible to give to our herd of Shorthorns the attention they deserve. It is a collection of breeding cattle in which we have expended a great deal of energy and money, and in offering it at this particular time we feel quite sure that we are placing it on the market when at it's best. Through sales at private treaty, and the consignment which we sent to the May sale in Tulsa, as well as recent additions in breeding matrons, we had reduced and shaped the herd to the form, which in our opinion would render it the most efficient. It is in this form that it will be sold—the great sire Missie's Last at the head of a collection of foundation matrons, the combination through which we were to build a still greater herd.

In selling heifers that have been reared in practical breeding condition, we do not feel that any guarantee of future usefulness should be given in making this dispersion. All females with calves at foot or safe in calf carry their own guarantee. In presenting Missie's Last, however, we are willing to place on him the usual guarantee that goes with a tried sire.

The sixty days retest will be granted wherever required.

C. E. SUPPES & SON,
Tulsa, Okla.

Never in the history of the breed has the need of real herd bulls been so imperative as now. New herds being established in great numbers, the extreme quality of females which so many new men are buying, as well as the effort on the part of old breeders to maintain and improve upon the quality of their production, all combine to make the demand acute, with resultant high prices.

However, the history of the trade reveals few instances where a proven sire has brought his actual worth. The disposition of breeders seems to be to prefer an untried prospect and in the light of this experience it is quite probable that Missie's Last, tried, proven and in his prime, will bring no more than a young bull of like promise. Wherever he goes and whatever he brings, he will be a valuable addition to his new home.
